The Ablest Political Paper He has Published in Many Years-A Touching Alinston to the Closing Days of His Public Life

LONDON, June 23.-Mr. Gladstone sent outtoday his election manifesto in the form of an address to the electors of Midlothian. It is undout tedly the ablest political paper that has come from the old man's hand in many years In it he discusses at some length the Irisl question, touches upon the minor issues of the campaign, and closes with a pathetic allusion to the probability that before the opening of another campaign be will be in his grave.

Ireland was never so loyal to the Crown, he says, never so closely attached to Great Britain, never so united in herself as in the years following 1782, when she enjoyed self-government, and until concord was disturbed after 1705 by the wicked machinations of her English enemies. For a generation after the union, Ireland had slept the sleep of physical misery and political servitude. The reform victories of 1620 and 1832 had given her consclousness and voice. Thereafter her heavy grievances and her battling aspirations had sciousness and voice. Thereafter her heavy grievances and her battling aspirations had formed the great standing burden of the British Parliament, and had been the principal impediment of its work.

In the bye elections it had been shown in recent years that the people of Great Britain recognized the irresistible claim which Irreland made upon their sense of justice. Iroland was caim and peaceful to-day because she relied upon the British electorate to relieve her of her sufferings and burdens. This patience under wrongs was a happy omen. Reciprocal affection undoubtedly would follow the frank corcession of self-government to the afflicted country. Home rule, sheltered by imperial supremacy, should be granted and England and Ireland would then be at lasting peace. Calm reason would soon bring Uister back to its senses and to brotherhood which existed before the union.

Mr. Glavistone then criticises recent English legislation and attempts at legislation on the part of the Government, incidentally describing Liberal Unionists as "dissention ex-Liberalis." He admits the importance of the labor questions and approves of reforms in electoral registration, as well as the payment of memories of the House of Commons so that labor memors of the House of Commons so that labor memors and hier families. The manifesto closes with these words:

"In the sixticth year of my public life. I necessarily feel that this is the last general election at which I can expect to solicit your suffrages. Only a small special share can belong to me in the work which I have sketched. I am sincerely grateful for your past confidence, and I humaly trust that I have done nothing to forfeit it. Even now closely direction at which still be permitted, through the Almighty's bounty, to render for a while to you my imperfect but devoted services."

IS NEILL JACK THE RIPPER? Further Evidence that He Killed Matilda

London, June 23. - The inquest into the death of Matilda Clover, suspected of having been poisoned by Thos. N. Cream, alias Neill, alias Murray, was continued to-day. Stevenson, the Government analyst, testified that he had analyzed the stomach of the deceased woman. who had been buried in October last, and whose body was exhumed on an order from the Secretary of State on the 13th of last month The examination revealed a large quantity of strychnine. By boiling an ounce of nux vomice one could obtain six grains of active strychnine, enough to fill one large capsule.

A chemist named Kirkby testified that Cream, allas Neill, bought at his shop in October last a quantity of nux vomica and some empty gelatine capsules. Now that the toils are closing around Neill his case is beginning to excite extraordinary attention, and the police are said to be seriously investigating with a view to ascertain whether he may not be Jack the Ripper.

The prisoner was hunted down largely through the efforts of Sergeant Patrick McIntyre of the Criminal Investigation Department. Sergeant McIntyre has testified that he made the acquaintance of Neill about six weeks ago. The prisoner knew who he was, and told him he had studied medicine at St. Thomas's Hospital, had been to Edinburgh and Dublin, and had afterward gone to America. He said that he was then repre-senting Dr. G. H. Harvey, drug manufacturer, of Saratoga Springs, U. S. A. He saw him sgain on May 10 on Westminster Bridge, McIntyre asked how he had been getting on, and he replied that he had been troubled by detectives following him about for several days.

They talked on general matters, and the prisoner said the only reason he could give why he was being followed was that he had some photographs about him of an indecent character. He asked McIntyre to make insome photographs about him of an indecent character. He asked McIntyre to make inquiries as to why he was being followed, and witness promised to do so. With Chief Inquiries as to why he was being followed, and witness promised to do so. With Chief Inspector Mulvaney and Inspector Harvey he saw him again on the following day. The meeting was accidental, and McIntyre introduced the inspectors as two local men. Nelli showed them his medicine cases. After the two inspectors had left, the prisoner told McIntyre that on the previous evening he had met a woman in the Westminster Bridge road, who was a "rip," and she had said to him that the police had sent her to make his acquaintance and find out who he was as they believed he was connected with the Stamford street poisoning cases. That was the first reference the acquired made to the Stamford street affair. Next day McIntyre called by appointment at Neill's address, and made an arrangement to meet him on the same evening. Neill then said that about a week before the last inquest upon the girls Shrivell and Marsh, when leaving his lodging in the morning a man, who represented himself as a detective and who said his name was Murray, accosted him in the street and questioned him as to his knowledge of Dr. Harper, and as to Dr. Harper's association with women. He added that the man Murray produced two letters which he showed to Noil. The letters were addressed to the girl Shrivell at Stamford street, and warned the girls to be careful of Dr. Harper, and said that Dr. Harper would poison them as he had poisoned the girls Clover and Harvey. The singular and significant point about this remark is that Detective Meintyre had up to this time never heard of that lover girl. It was this remark that led to insulties, and to the exhumation of Matilida Clover's lody. Clover's holy.

Elizabeth 'diasters testifled that she saw the prisoner. Neill, enter the house in which the Clover girl resided on the same night that the girl died. The inquest was then adjourned.

The New Oriental Bank President.

LONDON, June 23.-The New Oriental Bank has resolved in accordance with the wishes of the creditors, to go into voluntary liquidation. It is now said that the immediate cause of the toppage was the steady withdrawal of the fixed deposits as they became due. Within the last twelve months the bank has had to pay out fully £1,000,000 on this account, and it is still liable for £4,000,000, for it advertised everywhere for these deposits at high rate of interest. Besides its fixed deposits it is liable for about £600,000 on draits and acceptances, and contingently, for £500,000 on endorsements. It also joined the baring Guarantee Fund to the extent of £100,000. The paid-up capital is £937,000, and there is nothing to call up on the shares. Only had a million of this capital is sterling: the remainder is in rupee and dollar shares issued in the First.

Stantry Will Talk to the Costermongers, Losnes, June 23.-Henry M. Stanley will address a meeting of the costermongers in north Lambeth to-morrow. The costermongers of that vicinity are a specially roughand-ready sort of crowd, and a row is confidently anticipated. It is said that the Liberals propose, if Stanley is elected, to attempt to unseat him on the ground that his naturalization as a British subject is irregular and incomplete. Stanley, as is well known, was born a British subject, and if any such move is contemplated his opponents will have to show that he became an American citizen when he emigrated to that country. This may be somewhat difficult to prove.

JOHNSTON ON THE SLAVE TRADE. He Thinks He Has Denit a Great Blow the Truffe in Central Africa.

LONDON, June 22. - Parliamentary papers have been issued containing despatches from Mr. H. H. Johnston, the British Commissioner in East Africa for the country north of the Zambesi River, relating to the measures taken by him for suppressing the traffic in slaves carried on by the chiefs on the shores of Lake Nyassa. He found early during his stay in the country that unless he dealt firmly with the larger chiefs it was hopeless to expect the cooperation of the petty rulers in stopping slave caravans or abstaining from raids on their neighbors. These big chiefs had also been guilty of the grossest outrages, and one of neighbors. These big chiefs had also been guilty of the grossest outrages, and one of them had not only robbed Mr. Buchanan, the British Consul, but had also stripped him naked and publicly flogged him.

Mr. Johnston gives the details of his fighting with the two chiefs, Makanjira and Mponda, the greatest slave traders on lake Nyassa. Some particulars of this fighting have already been particulars of this fighting have already been particulars of this fighting have already been published, including the account of Johnston's reverse at the hands of Makanjira, when the Englishman lost some of his white comrades. His subsequent operations, however, restored his prestige, and established his supremacy over the Nyassa region. He says:

"We have for the present crippled the slave trade in South Nyassaland. We have brought seven important chiefs and many lesser ones to terms either by hard fighting or by persuation. We have released about 300 slaves and have broken up two large sinve caravans. Coast caravans coming from Lindi and kilwa to buy slaves in the devastated regions west of Nyassa will have no means of crossing the lake in safety with their merchandise. We have crippled Makanjira so that he can no longer ferry slave caravans across the lake. Fort Johnston, at the south end of the lake, stops their journey overland round the south shore and the Livingstoria Mountains, and the British settlements arrest them at the north end of Nyassa. We think we have in live months dealt a great blow to the Central African slave trade."

PRINCE BISMARCK STARTS HOME.

He Thanks the Viennese for Their E. thustasm and Hopes to Call Again.

VIENNA, June 23.-Prince Bismarck visited the City Hall to-day, and was everywhere greeted by enthusiastic multitudes. The peo ple cheered and shouted, and were almost frantic in their demonstrations. Prince Bismarck at first endeavored to avoid the crowd, but could not escape recognizing the ovation, which evidently deeply gratifled him. Ho said he was grateful for the cordial kindness shown him by the people of Vienna, and hoped at some future time to revisit their city.

Prince Bismarck took the train for Munich at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon amid the cheers of the German students, who were watching for his departure. In order to escape a general popular evation, the Prince went on an earlier train than it had been reported he would take. At the first stopping place a cornflower bouquet was presented to him. Count Herbert and his bride joined Prince Bismarck at Lintz, in upper Austria, ninety-eight miles from Vienna.

Prince Bismarck drank Bavarian beer at the Biergarten last night, and had an enthusiastic ovation in cheers and song. It is officially said that Prince Bismarck, when passing through Berlin, did not seek an audience with Kaiser William, as reported.

did not salute him with adequate punctillousness.

There was a great popular outery against Hopfner, and Wolff printed an account of the affair as well as a lew sharp editorial comments. Hopfner and a friend went to Wolffs house to discipline him, forced their way in when entrance was reduced them, and drew their swords on the editor with the manifest intention of slashing him because he refused to apologize and print a retraction.

Wolff drove them out at the point of his revolver and lodged a complaint against them. There was such a general demand for exemplary punishment that Hopfner became frightened, and wrote a very humble apology to Wolff, requesting him at the same time to withdraw his complaint. This Wolff was persuaded by Hopfner's friends to attempt, but the matter had gone so far that the inquiry had to proceed.

Hopfner's companion in the effort to intimidate Wolff was sentenced to the same term of confinement. The sentencing of the two Lieutenants has been received with great rejoicing by the people of Speyer, who suffer from the arrogance of the garrison as severely as do the citizens of Mayence.

The Massacre of German Boldlers.

BERLIN, June 23.-It is officially reported, or the strength of advices from German East Africa, that Lieuts, Baron Butow and Wolfrum and twenty Soudanese were killed in the fight on the south slope of Kilima-Njaro, and that two Sergeants and sixty-four men are holding Kilima-Njaro against the enemy. One hundred and eighty men are hurrying to the relief of the belenguered force. This despatch goes to confirm the report of June 10 at Zanzibar. Of the sovere defeat of Baron Bulow on the 10th first. THE ENTIRE TELEGRAPH SERVICE AT A STANDSTILL Operators Signal as Usual, but Say They Can Get No Response to Their Calls— One Wire Opened at Last Between Va-lentia and Cadiz—The Men's Grievances, London, June 23.-The telegraphers' strike in Spain is perhaps the most novel labor move-ment ever inaugurated. All the details of the affair were excellently arranged long beforehand, so that there should be no hitch. The Government were taken completely by surorise. Suddenly they found all communication by wire stopped, though the telegraphic system was apparently in good working order. The operators did not leave their posts, but when asked to send messages they signalled as usual, and informed the officials that there was no response to their calls for the distant offices. This sort of passive resistance puzzled the officials.

The Home Secretary in Madrid and the Governors of the various provinces entered the files escorted by gendarmes, and ordered the operators to establish communication in their presence. The operators replied respectfully. after calling the offices as commanded, that they received no answer, and therefore could not send the messages offered.

It seems that it was part of the plan of the men, arranged beforehand, that no operator should answer when his office was called for on the wires. When it was found that telegraphic communication between Madrid and the provinces was cut off there was almost a panic on the Bourse and in official circles. Rumors of revolution began to fly about. The first despatches which the Government was able to send to the provincial Governors were put through by the courtesy of the railway officials over the wires generally devoted to train orders. The railway operators were in sympathy with the strikers, and would not handle the Government's messages, but some of the railway officials who are practical telegranhers themselves manned the wires and transmitted the messages, which consisted of warnings to the Governors to prepare to oppose a deal between the Carlists and the Republicans, as it was rumored that these factions were to combine in a revolt against the Government, profiting by the demoralization occasioned by the strike.

Business on the Bourse was paralyzed. The situation is still hardly improved, but a despatch sent from Perpignan yesterday morning, which has just reached here, says that one wire had been opened for communication hetween Cadiz and Valencia. There are grave fears lest troubles break out in Barcelona, which province has hardly quieted down from a series of dangerous labor agitations. The leaders of the seditious and anarchical movements are likely to take advantage of the situation for renew their activity.

The operators struck because their appeals for the redress of a number of long-standing grievances were disregarded. The immediate cause was the appointment of a postal officer of only three years' service to the office of the readress of officers of thirty years' service. There is as yet no indication as to which side is likely to win in the contest. Rumors of revolution began to fly about. The first despatches which the Government was

MARQUIS DE MORES KILLS A MAN He Pierces Capt. Mayer's Lung in a Duel with Swords.

Paris, June 23.-The Marquis de Mores, who fought a duel in March last with M. Isaac, the Sub-Prefect of Fourmies, in which he seriously wounded his antagonist, has just fought another duel, with Capt. Mayer, a well-known and dexterous swordsman. argued that the mother, having the natural custody of the child, had been guilty of no crime in permitting her to dance in Kaliko" at the Broadway Theatre on the night of June 0. The law, which forbids a child to exhibit as "a rope or wire walker, dancer, gymnast, contortionist, rider, or acrobat," in fringed on a parent's right to a child's ser vices, while the parent was responsible for its maintenance and education. It was also unconstitutional because it was a violation of the liberty of the child to pursue a vocation. Nothing could be said against the character of the play, theatre, or audience. The child danced three minutes, and only four more on an encore. Her costume was decent. There could, therefore, be no pretence that her health or morals were endangered.

He desired to call attention to an anomaly of the law. When this statute was passed, the old common law as to the ages for marriage provalled. A girl of 12 years and a boy of 14 could then contract marriage without their parents' consent. Yet that girl could be committed for dancing, in order, it might be, to support her own child born in lawful wedlock. She might marry a theatrical manager, who could be apprehended for permitting his wife to dance. The wife could then be taken from her husband and child.

Elbridge T. Gorry said in reply that the statute was intended to prevent impecunious and rapacious people from making money at the expense of their children of tender years. He said:

"In speciacular plays the children are vices, while the parent was responsible for it

He said:

In spectacular plays the children are brought in contact with persons about whose morals the less said the better. When they constantly appear on the stage they lose their modesty, and become bold, forward, and impudent. When they arrive at the limit age of the law they have usually entered on the downward path."

Valued at $50,000 in Her Husband's Suli Against a Princeton Boy. Cora Stewart, known to herself as "Lady Stewart." the robust young English woman who raced into the middle ring of New York's giddy show two or three years ago and at-tracted considerable attention at various times by her posings in a number of dizzy acts, is in the ring again. The present act, although not so spectacular as many in which she has been seen and heard of in this city, is in its main feature about the most interesting and funniest of all. She is placed in evidence marked Exhibit A, in a lawsuit as the possessor of a set of second-hand affections valued at $50,000. Capt. Donald Stewart, the husband of the lady, is the appraiser, and claiming that he has lost possession of the exhibit in question is bringing suit against Ferris Thompson, a boy who lives with his mother in this city, for the recovery of the price quoted.

When Cora Stewart was most conspicuous around New York, a year or two ago, almost equally conspicuous with her was a youth reerred to as "Lady Stewart's dude." It is surmised that Ferris Thompson was the dude. A couple of months ago Mrs. Stewart was before Justice Grady in the Jefferson Market Police Justice Grady in the Jefferson Market Police Court charged with beating Mrs. Houghton of the House of All Nations over the head with an umbrella. Mrs. Stewart told the Justice that Mrs. Houghton had her. Mrs. Stewart's, husband under lock and key and would not deliver him up. BLACKMAIL, THE DRUGGIST SAYS. It Was in His Store that Wechsung Was Druggist Otto Doepfner of 937 Third avenue moved before Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court yesterday for the dismissal of an action which 6-year-old Etta Meyer brought against him through her father, George Meyer, as guardian, to recover $50,000 dam ages. The motion was made on the ground that the father had not filed security for costs. Meyer, who is a shoemaker at 900 Third avenue, says that Doepfner took liberties with his child from Feb. 1 to April 1 last. His counsel is John Eichler of 113 St. Mark's place.

John W. Goff, the defendant's counsel, said yesterday on the motion that the case was a scheme of Eichier and his client to blackmail the druggist. Before bringing suit Eichier had made several efforts to obtain money from Doepfner, and in a letter threatened him with proceedings unless he would settle. It was only after he had failed to secure any money that the summons was served.

Mr. Goff said he had had Eichier arraigned before Justice White on a charge of blackmail and held for the action of the Grand Jury, which subsequently indicted him. Eichier would be tried in General Sessions on Monday.

H. J. Goldsmith, counsel for the plaintiff on the motion, scouted the idea of blackmail and said that Eichier would be cleared on the trial. The action had been brought in good faith and would be prosecuted. Eichier had a respectable clientele on the east side, and had been in practice for eleven years. This was the first charge made against him. Justice Andrews reserved decision.

A Wedding to Gospel Hall,

Gospel Hall in Gates avenue, near Marcy, in Brooklyn, is the meeting place for a congregation composed of fifty or sixty persons of wealth and refinement who call themselver of wealth and reinement who can the carrier of the christians." but have no church organization or minister. There was a marriage ceremony at Gospel Hall on Wednesday, the groom and bride being Dr. Harold Slade of 316 Jefferson avenue and Miss Emma Anderson of Boston. Civil Justice Patterson officiated.

The City of Para Fast Enough for the Malia The Pacific Mail steamship City of Para proved herself yesterday worthy of becoming a mail carrier for Uncle Sam. She made a run a man carrier for the Sam. She made a run of four hours down the coast and back, developing a speed of 14.52 knots an hour, which is over half a knot more than it was necessary for her to make under the Postal Subsidy act.
She burned coal at the rate of about forty tons a day. A board of naval officers superintended the trip. FATHER MOLLINGER'S ALLEGED HEIR. Paper Hanger John De Vries Hoffman of

An alleged heir of the late Father Mollinger, who died at Pittsburgh on June 15, has turned up in this city. His name is John De Vries Hoffman. He is a paper hanger living at 609 East 143d street. He lives in a rear tenement, and is said to be very poor. He alleges that his mother was the sister of Father Mol linger's father and that he was therefore first linger's father and that he was therefore first cousin to the priest. He has brothers and sisters living in Holland, where he also was born. He came to this country many years ago. J.C. J. Langbein, his attorney, said yearerday that he was convinced that Hoffman was telling the truth. Mr. Langbein said also that there is no other relative of the dead priest in this country.

If it is true, as alleged, that Father Mollinger died intestate, the nearest heir-at-law will come in for a great deal of money, the priest's estate being valued all the way from $500,000 estate being valued all the way from $500,000 to $1,000,000. Mr. Langbein has written to the Surrogate of Alleghany county for information, and also communicated with Mr. George Mayer. President of the Alleghany Trust Company, who has taken out letters of administration on the estate. Mr. Meyers remembers a will made by Father Mollinger twenty years ago, but that has disappeared.
